Transition Management

The most critical part of the transition plan is the process of taking over of the Client's assets from the incumbent service provider. The approach of our management is to establish good rapport with the management team of the incumbent provider. This normally creates a healthy work environment and ensures smooth transition coordination.

The next stage of the transition process is induction of Site Security Manager and site supervisors and their introduction to the colleagues from the incumbent provider. At this stage, it is important to maintain clear lines of communication, share experiences and challenges.

Once the supervisors become familiar with the site and its intricacies, we will commence deployment of specialist teams to ensure the key functions on site are taken over well in advance.

This will enable the specialists to learn various technologies used by the security team and integrate their skills. At this stage, we will commence the process of taking over and assuming control of site equipment: keys, communication equipment, logs and registers, vehicles, furniture etc.

The list of the equipment taken over from the incumbent provider will then be compared with the site master lists provided by the Client. Any findings/discrepancies will be outlined in a detailed Site Hand/Take Over report.

At the last stage of transition plan, general security guards will be inducted to the site, using the "shadowing" principle, proven the best industry practice. The Strategic Security Services guards, under SSS supervision and in presence of Strategic Security Services trainer/quality control officer, will be deployed at the posts along with the existing guards and make observations of the post surroundings, the nature of visitors, details of performed duties, on/off peak hours etc. for 2

– 3 days, depending on the complexity of the assignment. Thereafter, Strategic Security Services guards will perform the duties in presence of incumbent security guards and Strategic Security Services supervisors to ensure the guards are comfortable with the duties/posts they are responsible

Risk Managment & Investigation

STRATEGIC SECURITY

Naturally, each type of problem demands its own methods of investigation. However, certain common threads run through each type of investigation situation.

In essence, investigations are just a tool for management to use in analyzing the reasons for problems or gathering data to make management decisions.

Our Specialist teams cover site and business risk assessment, investigation and surveillance, profiling screening and vetting of customer personnel.

A Security Risk Assessment identifies all your critical assets, vulnerabilities and controls in your company to ensure that all your risks have been properly mitigated.

Many different problems can lead companies to start an investigation, and not every investigation necessarily fits the popular profile of interrogations, witnesses under harsh lights, and long, drawn-out detective work. So we're professional in dealing with the common reasons why companies investigate employees or situations.
